Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE 3 MONTH(S) FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136(a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If the period for reply specified above is less than thirty (30) days, a reply within the statutory minimum of thirty (30) days will be considered timely.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133). Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendments Arguments

1. The amendments along with the arguments filed therewith on January 6, 2005 have been entered and carefully considered by the examiner.

The objection to the drawings has been withdrawn.

With respect to the prior art rejection, Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-10 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Homeyer et al [6,842,686].

Homeyer et al discloses a method and device for controlling the drive unit of a vehicle by adjusting an output quantity of the drive unit in dependence upon desired input quantities (abstract, figure 1, column 2). According to Homeyer et al, the adjustment (e.g., control) of the output quantity is performed by forming a desired value which considers the desired value input quantities in a sequence of their priorities (column 3). Note that the priority may be based, for example, on actuating time. Homeyer et al further discloses that the desired input quantities are considered starting with the quantity having the lowest quantity, for example the smallest actuating time. See column 3. In column 4, Homeyer et al discloses coupling (or assigning) different priorities to the desired input quantities (lines 19-28). See also column 5. Homeyer et al discloses in column 6 that the priority is fixedly or permanently assigned to each of the desired input quantities. Moreover, in column 5, Homeyer et al discloses that the priority is variably assigned to the each one of the desired input quantities and that the priorities are assigned upon the operating state of the vehicle (lines 10-15). See also column 6. As described in the abstract and columns 2-3, in particular, Homeyer et al discloses that different types of desired input quantities are considered by different modules and desired input quantities of the same type are considered by a single module for forming the desired value. The desired value, according to Homeyer et al, can be a desired torque (column 3, 6). As described in column 7, the desired input quantities limit the desired value by an additive (or maximum) amount.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
